

Inspiration

Twenty-Eighth Church of Christ, Scientist, Los Angeles, California, USA

I like working with Rule of Conduct from the Church Manual. "No objectionable pictures shall be exhibited in the rooms where the Christian Science textbook is published or sold. No idle gossip, no slander, no mischief-making, no evil speaking shall be allowed."

Some thoughts for today are:

One objectionable picture might be "no sales today in the Reading Room."

Gossip might be: the public is not interested in Christian Science. That does not seem to be a nice thing to say about the public.

Slander is making a false spoken statement damaging to a person's reputation: "the public cannot understand Science and Health, that there is something else that is easier to understand." "The author has not compromised conscience to suit the general drift of thought, but has bluntly and honestly given the text of Truth. She has made no effort to embellish, elaborate, or treat in full detail so infinite a theme. By thousands of well-authenticated case of healing, she and her students have proved the worth of her teachings."

Mischief-making or causing trouble between two people: what is being said about other church members, other people in other countries, government, etc. "In Science, divine Love along governs man..."

No evil speaking: "no one comes into the Reading Room" has God forgotten God's creation? has the Christ lost the ability to be the "true idea voicing good, the divine message from God to men speaking to the human consciousness." Has the Christ stopped "dispelling the illusions of the senses;" no longer "the Way, the Truth, and the Life, healing the sick and casting out evils, destroying sin, disease, and death"?

Another form of evil speaking is: "the public is confused between Christian Science and Scientology." Making this statement might be a form of malpractice. The public is not confused because the public are all idea of Mind. Is Mind confused between Christian Science and Scientology? Then Mind's idea is not confused either.

The home for the products in our Reading Rooms is not on our shelves. Their home is in the hands of customers in our cities, being used. And just when we have a guest over to our home, we bring out the best that we have. The same thing is true for the products in the Reading Room. We do not give away anything for free in our Reading Room. We will give discounts when needed, but if a book is too faded to sell or if books are brought in to be donated, we give all of them to places like Goodwill or Salvation Army with a sticker inside the book with the Christian Science Reading Room address. From this we have had customers come in saying, "I found this book at _____ and they mentioned this woman, Mary Baker Eddy and I would like to learn more about her. (and then we sell them a biography on Mary Baker Eddy) or "I read this biography on Mary Baker Eddy and she wrote this book on Christian healing and do you still have this book? I would like to read it." (and then we sell them a copy of Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures.) We have found that people tend not to trust books or organizations that give away free books. (“there is always a price. Nothing is free.”) So we charge something, then the individual values what they have been given and it does not become a book that has sat in the box or on the shelf for years.

Christian Science Monitor Honors In On Values In New Campaign (10/20/2022)

Talk to anyone in journalism. "News avoidance" is a thing. People simply can't cope with a daily dose of anger, failure, fear, and frustration. The Monitor was created to antidote this narrow view of news. Now, we're going to make that even plainer.

Some of you will remember our Respect Project or Finding Resilience. By focusing on the values behind the news, we gave you a deeper view of the news and showed how it can highlight solutions that unite rather than divide. We're going to do much more of this going forward. We're going to clearly identify the values driving the news – whether it's respect, compassion, responsibility, freedom, or so on.

Visit our new Values Hub at to see what we mean. Watch your email inbox to learn more from Monitor staff. If you weren't able to join us for the live presentation, please visit the Reading Room Resources page to watch the replay of our webinar with Monitor Managing Editor, Amelia Newcomb, and product owner, Kim Proctor as they discuss this values campaign in more detail.
